Women in STEM Scholarship

The scholarship was established by Patrick Whelan who advocates for females and higher education, specifically in the fields of science, technology, engineering and math. In fact, he supports the educational attainment of his two daughters, as they grow to become productive female leaders with a hope for their future to achieve high wage, high demand careers. He understands the power of education and gender equality. This scholarship allows his passion for assisting and promoting females in successfully achieving their educational and career aspirations in the field of STEM.

Students eligible for this award are pursuing transfer opportunities in:
Engineering, Biological Sciences, Mathematics, Information Technology, Radiological Technology, and any NTCC transfer-based health science program.
